LUCKLESS JOHNSTOWN.

Fire Seizes Upon Much That the Flood Had Left.

Twenty-five houses totally destroyed, including the school house.
JOHNSTOWN, Pa., June 25.—A fire which broke out shortly after noon yesterday in the First Ward consumed all but three of the buildings in the district bounded by Market and Walnut streets, and by Main, Second and the river. Twenty-five houses were totally destroyed, including the large brick school-house. Many of the buildings destroyed had been saved from their foundations, though many of them contained household goods which had been saved from the flood. But a small amount of these goods were saved. The fire is supposed to have originated from sparks flying from the burning debris in the neighborhood. The Philadelphia fire companies here have been called out, and have been only subdued by tearing down houses in their path. The loss has not yet been fixed. Notwithstanding that the force of the explosion was so great, the ruins here were reduced nearly one-half today, a remarkable showing was made in the way of clearing up the wreckage. One heavy block followed another in the debris above the railroad bridge, and Manager Phillips, who has charge of the work, says he will have the place cleared up by Thursday. The various workmen, camps, were brought together in accordance with the request of Surgeon General Reed. All the superfluous straw and garbage about the camps were burned. The workmen were ordered to remove all the debris to the choicest quarters.

FATAL EXPERIMENT.

Two Boys Undertake to Run a Steam Engine and Kill Themselves.

PHILADELPHIA, June 24.—Harry and William Jessor, aged 15 and 17 years, respectively, living at No. 921 South Third street, were killed yesterday by the explosion of an old range boiler with which they were experimenting. A boy named Henry Kales was cut in the face, and Mrs. Flora Kales was badly scalded about the back. The Jessor boys were fond of mechanical experiments, and were using the old boiler to generate steam, with which they ran a miniature engine. The steam passed through pipes from the boiler to the engine. The boys intended to attach the engine to an ice-cream freezer, so that hand-turning could be dispensed with. While Harry was oiling the engine, and Willie was banking the fire with bricks, a terrific explosion occurred, which was felt for blocks around. Both boys were hurled some distance and landed on their heads. Harry died instantly, and Willie died a few hours later. The boiler was a piece of old machinery, and the boys had no idea of the danger involved in their experiment.

MURDERERS SET FREE.

The Peculiar Ruling of a Virginia Judge Throws the Case Entirely Out of Court.
ONANCOCK, Va., June 24.—Last March Mrs. Virginia Taylor was convicted of poisoning her husband, the jury finding a verdict of murder in the second degree. The trial lasted nearly a week and attracted considerable attention. Mrs. Taylor was defended by the ablest lawyers in the county, who appealed from the county court to circuit court on exceptions to the rulings of the judge. In his charge to the jury the judge had instructed them that if they found the evidence against the accused was not sufficient to justify a verdict of murder, they were to find a verdict of guilty to the lesser crime of manslaughter. The jury found a verdict of guilty to the lesser crime, and the judge set the case aside for a new trial. The case is now before the circuit court, and the judge has ruled that the case is to be tried as a new case, and the jury is to be instructed that if they find the evidence against the accused is not sufficient to justify a verdict of murder, they are to find a verdict of guilty to the lesser crime of manslaughter.
